that a central contact may be positive. In this way all people could be informed about on-going activities from one office and it may avoid confusion. I emphasized that we were more than willing to keep lines of communication open.

2. He felt we were over stepping our bounds by making specific recommendations, such as, posting signs at sinks. My response was that we were giving examples of how to "cease exposure". The Navy is free to choose any method that will cease the exposure.
3. Why was Sally Shaver involved in these calls? Is it routine for her to be involved at this level? Response: I told him that she had been involved in conferences with other branches of the service and this was not unusual.

Narrative Summary: Commander Williams returned my call. I requested information about the March 1994 training course in Washington DC. He will have the coordinotor for the course call me.

He wanted to discuss Camp Lejuene. The following points were discussed:

1. Are we losing a working relationship with Camp Lejuene? Is ATSDR upset with the communication that is taking place?

I told him that Carole Hossom had informed me that she could no longer call the base in general, but had to go through a point of contact. I told him this made information gathering difficult for us. His response was that because the base involved Marines, civilians, and Navy personnel
