Queen heard calling Chinese officials 'rude'

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has been overheard on video describing Chinese officials as "very rude to the ambassador" in a conversation with a senior police officer at a Buckingham Palace event celebrating her birthday.

The comments, which became public Wednesday, were unusual because the 90-year-old monarch has been careful to steer clear of politics during her long reign.

The incident, recorded by the palace's official cameraman, captured police Commander Lucy D'Orsi telling the queen that arranging the state visit by Chinese President Xi in October had been a "testing time."

Elizabeth responded: "They were very rude to the ambassador."

It was the second embarrassment from Tuesday's event, where Prime Minister David Cameron was overheard describing Nigeria and Afghanistan as "possibly the two most corrupt countries in the world."

"We do not comment on the queen's private conversations," said a palace official, who declined to be identified. "However, the Chinese state visit was extremely successful and all parties worked closely to ensure it proceeded smoothly."

The video showed an official introducing D'Orsi to the queen, and going on to say that the officer had been "seriously undermined by the Chinese" in the handling of the visit.

IRAQ

93 killed, 165 wounded in Baghdad bombings

BAGHDAD (AP) — In the deadliest violence in Baghdad this year, three car bombs claimed by the Islamic State group killed 93 people across the Iraqi capital Wednesday, demonstrating the extremists' ability to mount significant attacks despite major battlefield losses.

The separate bombings, which also wounded 165 people, came at a time of turmoil and deadlock in Iraq's government and parliament. The Interior Ministry blamed the attacks on "political bickering" that is increasingly threatening the security of the civilian population.

The largest car bomb ripped through a crowded outdoor market selling food, clothing and household goods in the predominantly Shiite neighborhood of Sadr City during the morning, killing at least 63 people and wounding 85.

Streets were stained with blood, building facades were heavily damaged and smoke billowed from stores gutted by the blast. Dozens of people walked through mangled wreckage of cars and other debris as ambulances ferried away the injured.

The bomb was in a pickup truck loaded with fruit and vegetables. It was parked by a man who had quickly disappeared into the crowd, said

Security forces inspect the scene after a car bomb explosion at a crowded outdoor market in the Iraqi capital's eastern district of Sadr City on Wednesday.

Karim Salih, a 45-year-old grocer who escaped injury.

"It was such a thunderous explosion that jolted the ground," Salih said. "The force of the explosion threw me for meters away and I lost consciousness for a few minutes."

The sprawling slum of Sadr City is home to 2.5 million people—almost half of Baghdad's population of about 6 million.

Two more car bombs exploded elsewhere in the afternoon, killing at least 30 and wounded 80, police officials said.

One bomb targeted a police station in the northwestern Kadhimiyah neighborhood, while another struck in the northern neighborhood of Jamiya.

The casualty figures were released by medical officials who all spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to brief reporters.

In online statements, the Islamic State group claimed responsibility for the bombings, which were condemned by Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi, as well as the United States.

The IS group said it had targeted Shiite militiamen, but hospital and security officials said the vast majority of the victims were civilians.

2-time $1M winner: 'This is impossible'

WEST BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — A construction worker who won $1 million in a lottery scratch-off game four years ago has defied enormous odds by hitting a $1 million jackpot again.

But don't call him lucky. After Bruce Magistro hit the jackpot the first time in 2012, his wife, Yvonne, lost a three-year battle with cancer.

Much of the prize money went to pay for her medical bills. "She passed away two years ago today," Magistro's son, Nick Mayers, said Wednesday.

He said he was sure the second jackpot was her way of sending help back to the family. "This is definitely a gift, from her to him," Mayers said.

State lottery officials introduced Magistro at a news conference at the Long Island gas station where he bought the second winning ticket April 11.

Magistro said he plays the lottery every day and plunked down $20 at Mike's Super Citgo in West Babylon for a set of 10 Win for Life scratch-offs.

"This is impossible," Magistro said he thought as he scratched off a lottery ticket and realized he won $1 million. "I just couldn't believe I hit it two times."

He now plans to share his winnings with his three children and his fiancée.

State gaming officials said the odds Magistro beat to get the grand prize were 1 in 7,745,600, and they were 1 in 2,520,000 when he won the Extreme Cash scratch-off in 2012.
